Stacia M. Hays, DNP, APRN, CNE, CCTC, FAANP

1.0 CE Credit

Children with complex medical conditions (CMC) is a growing population in the United States and accounts for up to 70% of all pediatric healthcare costs. With the extensive needs of this population, gaps in care may occur including disjointed care, barriers to services and difficulty in transition of care to adult providers. These gaps create challenges and barriers which significantly impact families and lead to mistrust of the healthcare system. The family response is often interpreted as nonadherence to care and leads to fractured relationships between providers and families. This presentation will guide the advanced provider in recognizing and understanding these challenges and provide guidance on conversations and interventions to assist and empower these families within the healthcare system.

1.0 CE Credit

This presentation will provide an update to gerontological advanced nursing practice and to showcase evidence-based practice pearls for APRNs working with older adults. Older adults 65-years and older account for 30-40% of primary care visits. By 2050, the older adult population 65 years and older is expected to grow to nearly 90 million. By 2060, nearly one in four Americans will be 65 years and older, the number of 85-plus will triple, and the country will add a half million centenarians. Older adults carry a significant portion of the chronic disease burden with 60% of older adults having at least two chronic conditions. Four chronic conditions—heart disease, cancer, stroke, and diabetes—cause almost 2/3 of all deaths each year. At the same time there are a growing number of older adults who are living longer and who are living healthier than previous generations. This presentation will focus on the impact of age-related change on common chronic conditions in older adults and provide clinical pearls.
